Extract of a Letter to the Right Honourable the Earl Temple, upon the probable Means and Conſequences of his Lordſhip's Conduct with Regard to Mr. Wilkes.

MY LORD,

THE Spirit and Firmneſs of your Lordſhip's Attachment to Mr. Wilkes, the Favour and Protection with which you have publicly honoured and ſupported him, in his Hour of Diſtreſs, will ſufficiently vindicate the Propriety of addreſſing this Letter to your Lordſhip.——You have declared yourſelf the Patron of his Writings, and the Protector of his Perſon; nor is it eaſy to pronounce, whether this Declaration does greater Honour to the Author or the Patron. But, ſurely, your Lordſhip's entering a Court of Juſtice, to protect him from being oppreſſed by the Laws of his Country, muſt be acknowledged as an Inſtance of the deareſt Friendſhip. In what an amiable Light does your Lordſhip's Conduct appear, when placed in Contraſt with the Behaviour of all the other Lords of Oppoſition? They too had declared themſelves the Patrons of the North Briton's Genius and Erudition. They were delighted with the Wit and Pleaſantry, with which he varied this momentous Truth, That Lord Bute had the Misfortune of being born on the other Side of the Tweed. His Knowledge of the Conſtitution, and Laws of his Country; his Preciſion, in marking the exact Boundaries between Prerogative and Privilege; were Objects of their Admiration and Applauſe. Nor did they judge leſs favourably of the Politeneſs, and Urbanity, or what the Greeks called Atticiſm, of his Writings. They honoured the Zeal and Intrepidity, the Strength of Argument and Reaſon, with which he vindicated the Liberties of the People in general, againſt the Adminiſtration of a Scottiſh Favourite, while he boldly aſſerted his own Freedom of the Preſs. They were charmed with that Art of Diſtinguiſhing, by which he could profeſs to love and honour the amiable, great and reſpectable perſonal Qualities of his Prince, yet, in clear Terms, charge him with an infamous Fallacy, even in the moſt ſacred Office of Sovereignty, his Speech to his People.

They propoſed to end their very ſplendid and honourable Tour of political Feaſting, ſo pompouſly announced in the News-Papers, with a Dinner at his Houſe. But, when the Day approached, that in all Appearance, was to determine whether he was to be for ever either honoured or infamous, a Patriot or a Libeller, they coldly continued to profeſs, in private, all poſſible Regard for his Perſon, but deſired to be excuſed from giving any Proof of it in Public. They condeſcended to make him an Apology for their Conduct. They alledged, that, as they derived their own Honours from the Crown, they could not, in Honour, and their Senſe of Decency, join in any perſonal Inſult on the Sovereign, who wears it. How nobly ſuperior to theſe trivial Regards of Decency, and a ſeeming Senſe of Duty, has your Lordſhip acted? In Truth, their Apology is as mean a Sculking behind the Throne, as if they had adviſed his Majeſty, in Compaſſion to human Kind, and the Diſtreſſes of his People, to conclude what Mr. Wilkes calls an infamous Peace. Why did they not come forth in Support of the Dignity of the Crown, and give ſome public Proof of their Deteſtation, if ſuch indeed was their Opinion, of the Outrage offered to it?

I confeſs, my Lord, that the latter Part of this laſt Paragraph may ſeem to wander a little from the particular Intention of this Letter. Yet, under the Sanction of your Name, and even in perſonal Application of my Sentiments to your Lordſhip, I will preſume to give my Opinion of the Conduct of the noble Dukes, Earls, Lords, in the Oppoſition. I have been taught, my Lord, from my Youth upward, to bear a ſacred Reverence to what are uſually called Great Men, of all Parties and Denominations.——Could I, therefore, without the laſt Indecency, paſs over with only one caſual mention of them, ſo many moſt noble, mighty, puiſſant, and illuſtrious Perſonages? Theſe are their Titles; in one Inſtance moſt laudably obtained by the hairbrained Riots of Youth; in another, they deſcend, by Purity of Blood, from the Chaſtity of a King's Miſtreſs. The other Title, that of Right Honourable, which I think they all aſſume, is rather held by the Courteſy of their Country: For ſurely the Man, who received it upon a Promiſe of ſupporting his Majeſty's Adminiſtration, ſhould, in Honour, reſign it when his Conſcience diſlikes the Employment he then accepted, or his Merit and Abilities entitle him to a better.

Unequal to the Taſk of Praiſe and Panegyric, I gladly quit the Subject of their Lordſhips Virtue, Wiſdom, Loyalty, with a Thouſand Et Cætera's, merely to obſerve, that they have founded their Society upon the two beſt human Pillars (I mean thoſe of Eating and Drinking) and moſt likely to ſupport the Immortality of Oppoſition. I have endeavoured to find, but without Succeſs, from whence they took the Hint of this moſt excellent Inſtitution. Tacitus tells us, That the Germans planned all their moſt important Enterprizes when they were drunk; and, conſequently, incapable of Diſguiſe; deliberant dum fingere neſciunt. The North-American Savages proclaim War, by hanging on the War-Kettle to boil the Priſoners they are to take in Battle. The Hottentots make a Feaſt of their own, and the royal Wardrobe, that they may be under a Neceſſity of dreſſing, and making themſelves fine, at the Expence of their Enemies.

—— I have mentioned, perhaps with too much Levity, the Cuſtoms of Savages in their Declarations of War: But, in very Fact, has not our political Warfare been maintained as if upon the Plan of Savages, who imagine, when they kill an Enemy, that they ſhall inherit his Virtues, and his Victories? How has Lord Bute's Adminiſtration, in general, been vindicated and defended? By a perſonal Abuſe of almoſt all the Characters in the Oppoſition. How has Mr. Pitt's Continental War, and his gaudy Expeditions to the Coaſt of France, and his important Conqueſt of Belleiſle, been juſtified, except by his own Eloquence, and the North-Briton's proving Lord Bute a Scotſman? Let the Teſt and Conteſt reſt in Oblivion; but, may I not be permitted to aſk, Is there a ſingle Perſon, who has held any conſiderable Employment in the State, amidſt the late too frequent Changes in our Adminiſtrations, indeed for ſome Years paſt, who has not been the Subject of the Monitor's Dullneſs and Malignity? Yet the Monitor, when compared with the North-Briton, ſeems to have as little Intention, as Capacity, to do Miſchief.—Nor Age, nor Infancy, nor the Sex, whoſe Weakneſs is its Security, even in the Wars of Barbarians, have eſcaped the Fury of this outrageous Scribbler. When I ſpeak of the Sex, I mean the Violation of their good Fame, and the Reputation of their Chaſtity. Such is this Writer in his Rage of Patriotiſm; ſuch his Defence of the Liberties of his Country.

Yet this Writer has your Lordſhip thought it not diſhonourable to patronize, and protect. You have entered into his Council of Safety, with Beardmore and Coates, and Churchill. The Morning of his Trial, you walked in Weſtminſter-Hall, with familiar Arm in Arm, with Humphrey Coates. Oh! Honourable Companion for a Star and Garter! When——the Priſoner was diſcharged, your Lordſhip waited on him to his Houſe. When he graciouſly expoſed himſelf, at his Window, to the Acclamations of the Mob, he was ſupported on either Side by your Lordſhip, and that Wine-Daſher, Humphrey Coates. Are theſe the Supporters, theſe the Defenders, a Temple, an Humphrey Coates, and a Wilkes, of that Conſtitution, which has been the Glory, the Happineſs, of a free People; the Envy, and the Deſpair, of the Nations round us?

My Lord, I am not ignorant of the Foundations upon which our Ideas of Friendſhip, as it is politely called, are generally formed. A looſe Connection of Jollity and Wine, of thoſe conſtitutional Indulgences, which, in our good Breeding, we call Pleaſures, and the Vulgar more honeſtly call Vices.—Theſe are as much the Principles of Friendſhip among Mankind in general, as, in particular, the Gaming at Arthur's, the Riots in Covent-Garden, or the Virtue of the lately founded Inſtitution at Almack's. I will not ſay, with the Ludicrous of Falſtaff, that Friendſhip uſually ariſes between any two great Perſons, as between the Prince and Poines, Becauſe their Legs were both of a Thickneſs; but I may venture to aſſert, that Half the Friendſhips of the World are founded upon Sentiments of nothing more than a certain familiar Inſignificance of Behaviour, unreſtrained by any Awe, either of Eſteem, or ſuperior Abilities. But they riſe from this trivial Inſignificance; they endeavour to corrupt the Minds of the People; to alienate their Affections from Government; to inflame their Paſſions, and impoſe upon their Ignorance. Then does a Cataline and his Aſſociates quaff the Bowl of human Blood to the Deſtruction of their Country. Such Friendſhips, abhorred and execrable, are honoured with the Title of Ambition. But ſurely the deſperate Projects of Mr. Wilkes, his ruined Fortunes have as little Right to this Title, as your Lordſhip's Abilities. Ambition, conſidered as a Paſſion, is the nobleſt that ever Nature implanted in the Heart of Man. It is a Deſire of Power, with an Intention of uſing it for the Happineſs of human Kind. Even when depraved to the deteſtable and execrable Deſign of enſlaving our Fellow-Creatures, even then it muſt be made of ſterner Stuff, than Earl Temple's flimſy Compoſition. But whether Mr. Wilkes has made your Lordſhip the Tool of his deſperate Fortune, or your ſomething-like Ambition has made him the Inſtrument of its whimſical Projects, I will acquit your Lordſhip of any Attachment to him, that can deſerve the Name of Friendſhip. It is really difficult to conceive, how your Lordſhip could have entered into any Degree of Intimacy with a Man of his abandoned, profligate Character; a Man, whoſe common Converſation is Blaſphemy and Bawdry; whoſe ableſt Talents, as a Writer, are thoſe of Calumny and Defamation, varied by the Petulance of ſomething-like Wit, and every the vileſt Species of Ribaldry and Buffoonery.

My Lord, I would not willingly diſturb the Aſhes of the Dead; even of thoſe who are buried where three Roads meet. If I do not acknowledge the Dignity of Birth, in its Deſcent from a King's Miſtreſs, I ſurely do not mean to impute to Mr. Wilkes the Infamy or Iniquity of his Anceſtors. The Faith of Hiſtory, however, muſt aſſert the Fact, that his Father had amaſſed a conſiderable Fortune, which his Son ſoon ſquandered away in the lewdeſt Exceſſes of Riot and Diſſipation. The Father had amaſſed this Fortune by exerciſing a Trade equally deſtructive of the Health, Induſtry and Morals of our People. A Diſtiller, ſays Mr. Johnſon, is, one who makes and ſells pernicious and inflammatory Spirits. Provoked by this juſt and honeſt Definition, Mr. Wilkes, in Hand-bills, as at preſent, which he himſelf diſperſed, very liberally abuſed that moſt valuable Work, the ENGLISH DICTIONARY, upon its firſt Appearance, and hath ever ſince honoured the Author with his Attention. Perhaps there was Something prophetic of the Virtues of the Son in this Definition of the Father's Trade. He, too, is a political Diſtiller; a Maker and Vender of pernicious and inflammatory Spirits.

Perhaps, my Lord, one very ſingular Event in this Gentleman's Life, tho' itſelf moſt unaccountable, may yet account for your Lordſhip's very extraordinary Friendſhip towards him. It happened in the Courſe of his Amours.—— Oh! Nature, didſt thou intend him for amorous Diſportings? But it happened that a Woman, of conſiderable Fortune, whether in ſome fond Whim, or, without Rudeneſs to the Sex, in the Irregularity of ſome Female Appetite, like poor Deſdemona, fell violently in Love with what ſhe feared to look on. Whether he wooed her, as Iago tells us Othello courted his Miſtreſs, by bragging, and telling her fantaſtical Lies, your Lordſhip, the Confidant of his Amours, alone is able to inform us. She married him; he ſeized upon her Fortune, and ſpent it in Exceſſes, in which a modeſt Woman could have no Share. Your Lordſhip very righteouſly aſks, What Right had ſhe to complain? Did he not ſpend her Fortune, and his own, in the ſame Manner? "I confeſs, my Lord, I did not foreſee the Force of this Objection.—But, he appoints her a ſeparate Maintenance. He again grows needy and neceſſitous. He makes uſe of all the cruel Authority of a Huſband, to compel her to reſign the wretched Pittance he had appointed for her Subſiſtance. He inſults the Juſtice of his Country, by ſolliciting a Power to ſeize her Perſon. The Judge, humane and upright, rebukes him for the Horrors of ſuch a Proceſs; and from thence his avowed and open Enmity to Lord Mansfield.

I am not, my Lord, a Collector of villainous Anecdotes for the ſcandalous Chronicle; I would not ſearch into Priſons and Brothels for Proofs of the Depravity of Human Nature. I would not be an Hiſtorian in the Seſſions-paper, for more than the Lord Mayor receives for licenſing that infamous and impious Collection of all the Crimes, and worſe than Crimes, which an human Creature is capable of committing. Why then am I engaged in the Jails, the Brothels, the Seſſions-paper of a corrupt Heart? For this plain, ſimple Reaſon, To convince your Lordſhip, and, if poſſible, oblige you to confeſs, that the Man who has violated every ſocial, domeſtic, private Duty, can never be ſincere in his Profeſſions of Regard to the Public.——Amidſt ſuch a total Abhorrence of every Kind and Species of Virtue in this Man's Character, ſhall I honour him for the nobleſt of all human Virtues, the Love of our Country? Shall I give my Conſent, that this Man ſhall correct or amend the Conſtitution, according to his good Pleaſure? Shall we appoint his Integrity to iſſue out the public Treaſures? or ſhall his Spirit of Diſſipation be our Oeconomiſt?——Would you, my Lord, I aſk the Queſtion clearly, would you intruſt him with the Receipt and Management of your Eſtate?

Why ſhould this Man be thus openly protected, at every Expence of Money and Reputation; at every Hazard of Allegiance and Loyalty? What Abilities, what Virtue, what Reputation, what Weight of Property, can he boaſt, that can entitle him to your Lordſhip's Protection, againſt the Juſtice of his Country?——Has he been entruſted with Secrets, for ſo it is rumoured, which it may be dangerous to reveal? Could your Lordſhip, and the Party, have been thus exceſſively imprudent? Yet what other probable Account can be given of your Conduct towards him? What Conſequences may you not juſtly apprehend? Nor Obligations, nor Promiſes, nor Oaths can bind the Conſcience of a bad Man, or ſupport his Courage under the Terrors of Juſtice. But Mr. Wilkes has been ſuperior to every Temptation of Corruption. Let him name any one Man of Probity and Honour, or will your Lordſhip, his univerſal Patron, be Witneſs for him, that Lord Bute attempted in any Form or Manner to corrupt his Purity? This Challenge may be too boldly penned, even for the Courage of Mr. Wilkes. He will not aſſert the perſonal Appearance of the noble Lord in ſuch a ſcandalous Treaty. It could hardly be believed, even upon his own Veracity; that Lord Bute ſhould commit his Reputation to the Truſt and Confidence of a Man, whoſe Viſits of Civility and Offers of Service he had refuſed with Contempt, when this Man was leſs notoriouſly infamous. Well then, let either your Lordſhip or Mr. Wilkes point out any one Man of Probity to the Publick, who will acknowledge, that he was empowered, authoriſed, appointed by Lord Bute, to propoſe any ſuppoſed Terms of Corruption to Mr. Wilkes, and the Debate is ended. If not, let this one Falſhood more be added, no very conſiderable Addition, to the Lies of his Life, and to the Honour of your Lordſhip's Patronage and Protection.

NEW-YORK, Auguſt 1.

Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman at Surinam, to his Friend here, dated June 15, 1763.

MY laſt informed you of an Inſurrection of the Negroes in Rio Berbicie; it began in Rio Cagnia, on the Plantation of Mr. Vernuzobre, and in leſs than 10 Days was general in both Rivers. The Governor, with ſuch of the Inhabitants as eſcaped, retired into Fort Naſſau, where 4 Dutch Ships were lying; the Governor had ſcarcely Time left to acquaint the neighbouring Colonies of this horrid Diſaſter. Our Colony inſtantly diſpatched Troops to his Aſſiſtance, who arrived in Time to prevent the unfortunate Remainder from leaving the Colony. It is aſtoniſhing, that notwithſtanding thoſe four Ships were lying at the Fort, yet the Governor, by the unaccountable infamous Conduct of the Captains, was obliged to ſpike up his Guns, and burn the Fort; they had abſolutely refuſed giving any Aſſiſtance, and flatly told him to quit the Place by ſuch a Time, or they would ſail away, and leave him to his Fate. What could this unhappy Governor do but comply? At that Time he had not more than 23 Men able to bear Arms left. If our Letters had arrived in Time, thoſe Daſtards would have ſwung for it e'er now; two of them have eſcaped their Deſerts for a While; but I am ſure, if Juſtice is to be had in Holland, they will meet with it there on their Arrival.

"The Governor complains grievouſly of the Inhabitants, who behaved exceſſively ill. Some Creole Slaves who eſcaped to Demerara ſay, if the White People had made a Stand, Affairs would not have come to that Extremity. The Creole Negroes knew Nothing of the Plot. Our People have had ſeveral Skirmiſhes with them, in which the Rebels have been obliged to retreat with Loſs. The Governor had likewiſe received a Reinforcement of [illegible] Men from St. Euſtatia. It was agreed to make a general Attack on the Rebels the 9th of May. By our not hearing from him, I am afraid the Rebels have retreated to Corentyn, or thereabouts, and cut off our Land Communication. We have [illegible]

Companies of Regulars, under Command of a Major, to our Frontiers, to repel the Rebels from thence, in caſe they ſhould neſtle that Way.

By the lucky Arrival of a Sloop of War, and two other Veſſels from Barbados, with a Party of Marines, in Demerara, they were enabled to prevent any Inſurrection both in Demerara and Eſſequebo. Two Plantations had revolted; but were retaken, and the Ringleaders puniſhed. If thoſe two Colonies had alſo made a Reſiſtance, we ſhould ſoon have played the third and laſt Act. You eaſily will judge the dangerous Example it is to our Slaves, already too prone to revolt; if the moſt vigorous Methods are not purſued at Home to cruſh this Inſurrection, and preventing thoſe Rebels from ſettling or neſtling in the very Boſom of all our Colonies, I am afraid we ſhall, in a few Years, be without any on this Continent. I am, &c."

PHILADELPHIA, Auguſt 4.

On Sunday laſt Sermons were preached in moſt of the Congregations of this City, in Favour of the diſtreſſed Back Inhabitants, and Collections are now making for them from Houſe to Houſe.

Our Accounts from the Weſtward are as follow:

Lancaſter, July 28. There are certain Accounts that Indians have paſſed the South Mountain, and gone into York County; and that ſome of them have aſſuredly been ſeen near Carliſle. The Wants of the diſtreſſed Refugees have been greatly relieved, by Sums of Money collected in the different Congregations in this County. The Quakers and Menoniſts have been very liberal on this Occaſion, having raiſed a conſiderable Sum, and hired Men to aſſiſt the poor People in gathering in as much of their Harveſt as poſſible. And we are told, that ſeveral large Parties have again attempted to go over the Mountains, for this neceſſary and laudable Purpoſe; but the Riſk they run is ſo great, that we cannot think of them without Dread.

Carliſle, July 25. Two Indians were ſeen at Cannedogwynnah-Creek, about four Miles from Shippenſburgh, on Thurſday or Friday laſt, who attempted taking the Man that ſaw them, but he eſcaped. The People of Shearman's Valley are to go over this Day, and endeavour to ſave ſome of their Harveſt. They write from Virginia, that great Numbers of People are reduced to the utmoſt Diſtreſs by the Savages; but that ſeveral Parties of them had been repulſed by our Men, who had taken to the Forts.

July 30. On the 25th a conſiderable Number of the Inhabitants of Shearman's Valley went over (with a Party of Soldiers to guard them) to attempt ſaving as much of their Grain as might be ſtanding, and it is hoped a conſiderable Quantity will yet be preſerved. A Party of Volunteers, between Twenty and Thirty, went to the farther Side of the Valley, next the Tuſcarora Mountain, to ſee what Appearance there might be of Indians, as it was thought they would moſt probably be there, if any where in the Settlement; to ſearch for, and bury, the Dead at Buffaloe-Creek; and to aſſiſt the Inhabitants that lived along, or near, the Foot of the Mountain, in bringing off what they could; which Services they accordingly performed, burying the Remains of three Perſons; but ſaw no Marks of Indians having lately been there, excepting one Track, ſuppoſed about two or three Days old, near the Narrows of Buffaloe-Creek Hill; and heard ſome Hallooing, and firing of a Gun at another Place. A Number of the Inhabitants of Tuſcarora Valley go over To-morrow, with a Party of Soldiers, to endeavour to ſave Part of the Crops. Five Indians were ſeen laſt Sunday, about 16 or 17 Miles from this Place, up the Valley, towards the North Mountain; and two the Day before Yeſterday, about five or ſix Miles from Shippenſburgh, who fired at a young Man, but miſſed him. The eight Companies allowed for the Defence of this Frontier, are now very near, if not quite, compleat.

On the 25th of July there were in Shippenſburgh 1384 of our poor diſtreſſed Back Inhabitants, viz. Men 301; Women 345; Children 738; many of whom were obliged to lie in Barns, Stables, Cellars, and under old leaky Sheds, the Dwelling-houſes being all crowded.

From Fort Bedford we learn, that Colonel Bouquet, with the Army under his Command, were well at that Place the 27th ult. having met with no Interruption from the Enemy; and that he was to proceed on his March the next Day. That no Miſchief had been done in that Neighbourhood for three Weeks; and that the Number in all killed thereabouts is fifteen: But they had received Advice there from Fort Cumberland, that on Sunday, the 24th of laſt Month, as a Number of People were aſſembled at a Place of Worſhip, at The Calf Paſture, in Auguſta County, Virginia, they were attacked by a Party of Indians, who killed Twenty or upwards, of them.

ANNAPOLIS, Auguſt 11.

On Monday laſt Week, as Thomas Mulliken was riding the Road in Prince-George's County, near the Weſtern Branch, he got a fall from his Horſe, which kill'd him.

Yeſterday Morning, about Day-break, a large Barn belonging to Mr. David Evans, near the Head of South-River, wherein was a Quantity of Wheat, Rye, and Tobacco, was diſcovered to be on Fire, and was burnt to the Ground. How the Fire happened is not yet diſcovered; but is ſuppoſed to have been done wilfully.
